life is why™

Q: Do you have what it takes to be the next Generation of Lifesavers™?

A: Yes, you do! Take a few moments to learn the lifesaving skills of CPR and Choking Relief via the American Heart Association's on-campus training sessions. Join college students all over the country in becoming the next Generation of Lifesavers. It is fast, easy, and rewarding to learn CPR.

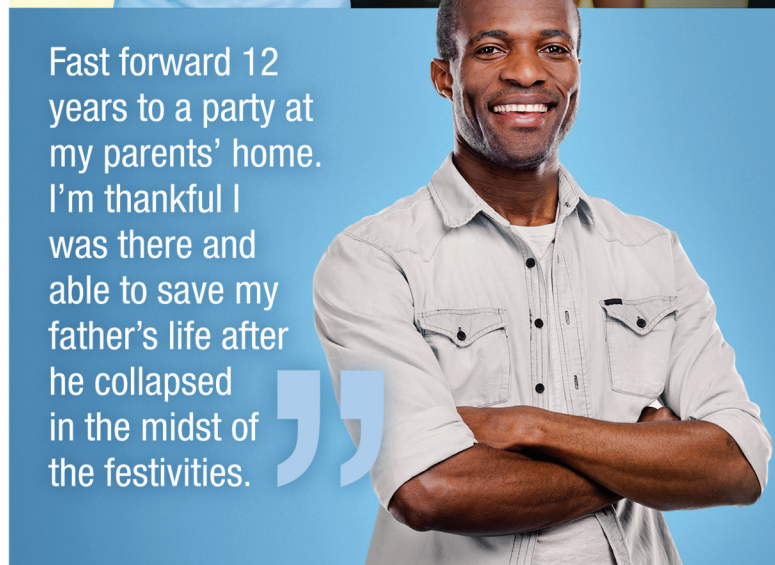

“ I remember I had a full course load the semester a CPR course was offered at my school. I was so busy that I almost decided against the 30 minute CPR training session.

Now that I run my own business I'm busier than ever. But, many years after that CPR training and other refresher courses, I helped a good friend when she suffered a cardiac arrest. I knew exactly what to do and am very happy that I was able to save my friend.”

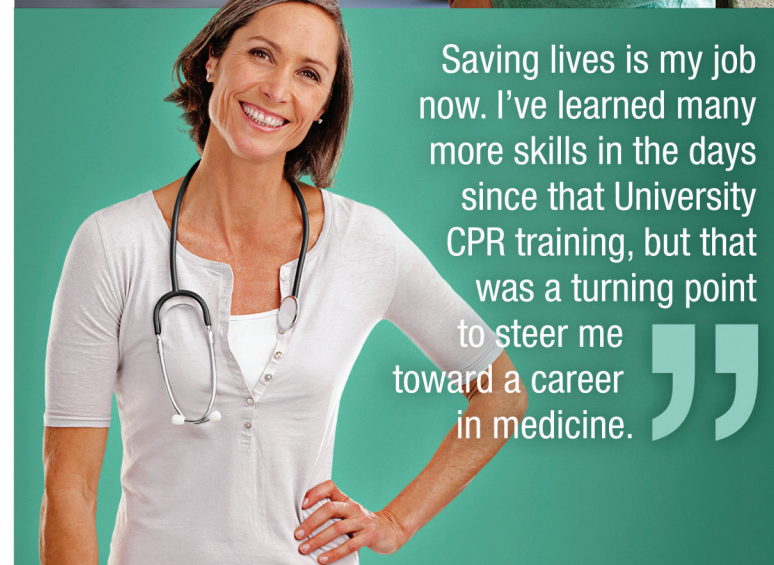

“ I was in college, so learning something new was nothing, well, new. The CPR training was right on campus, so why not learn the skills? It was convenient and easy.

Fast forward 12 years to a party at my parents' home. I'm thankful I was there and able to save my father's life after he collapsed in the midst of the festivities.”

“ I have always been a sponge for new experiences, especially in my early college years. I was undecided in my major, but with many sincere interests. The idea of helping to save someone's life was certainly appealing, so I signed up for a Hands-Only CPR training session on campus.

Saving lives is my job now. I've learned many more skills in the days since that University CPR training, but that was a turning point to steer me toward a career in medicine.”

“ I learned how to perform choking relief at a training session facilitated right here on campus with 35 of my classmates.

Just three months later I was able to help a choking colleague. Thank goodness I took time out of my day to learn life-saving skills on campus.”
